Honored

A surprise party, under the auspices of the O.B.S., was held Wednesday evening at the home of Mrs. G. A. Orr in honor of Mrs. Manford, who expects to leave Champion in the near future. Games and contests were enjoyed after lunch. Mrs. G. L. Dupre, W. M. presented the guest of honor with a beautiful gift to which the recipient responded very fittingly. The evening closed with the singing of "Auld Lang Syne."

The fourth annual New Year's Ball sponsored by the Champion O.B.P. will be held New Year's night in the Champion Community Hall, with music by "Our Own Boys." There will be New Year's novelty numbers, contetti, horns and noise makers. Everyone is eagerly looking forward to the dance and don't fail to attend.

Mrs. F. C. Alecock was in Barons on Thursday attending the annual meeting of the Women's Institute, taking the chair for the election of officers. Barons has a very energetic bunch of members, working amicably under the presidency of Mrs. W. J. Lebow, who was re-elected.

The "Blueson Ladies' Aid Tea and bake sale held on Saturday was very successful from every point of view. The display of cooking was outstanding and the attendance was unusually large. The ladies are to be congratulated on their remarkable success. The sum of $30.00 was realized.

Mrs. Clara Ashmore who has been a patient in the High River hospital, is convalescing at her home.

Women's Institute

The Women's Institute met at the home of Mrs. B. Hammett on Tuesday and had a very nice time indeed. A most inspiring letter from the Provincial President was read after which the election of officers was easy, everyone wanting to serve to the limit. Mrs. Stephenson reported that she couldn't get anyone to ask for a Xmas Hamper.

Mrs. Hagerman sends word that there will be an Institute broadcast on the last Thursday of each month from four to four thirty. The exchange of Christmas gifts took place and some lovely gifts were given and received.

After singing the National Anthem over twice to prove we knew all the words, we had a truly grand lunch served by Mrs. D. Hammett, Mrs. A. H. Hinton and D. Farmer assisted by the hostess and her good daughter Dorothy.

The officers for 1934 are: President, Mrs. M. G. Clever; 1st Vice-President, Mrs. D. Chamberlain; 2nd Vice-President, Mrs. B. L. Hannon; Secretary, Mrs. Alexander; Treas., Mrs. Wm. Ulrich. Directors—Mrs. J. Stephenson, Mrs. D. Watkins, Mrs. P. Dawson. Standing Committee—Child Welfare and Public Health, Mrs. J. N. Boushier; Education and Better Schools, Mrs. B. L. Baker; Legislation, Mrs. Boushier; Household Economy—Mrs. Dawson; Agriculture—Mrs. Watkins; League of Nations—Mrs. Farmer; Canadianization and Immigration—Mrs. Dean Smith; Canadian Industries, Mrs. Ulrich.

Relief Operations

Over 1,000 carloads of feed for livestock have been moved this season under the free freight policy into the dried-out areas of the province. Beginning Dec. 1, several new areas in the southern part of the province were added to the territory within which free freight privileges will apply. Among these will be the Comox Valley—Gadsby district on the Comox line of the C.P.R.; Barons to Anderson on the Leithbridge line, and Medicine Hat to Anderson. Settlers on the land under the relief settlement plan in Alberta now stand to win families, and the scheme has been discontinued for the season. The figure includes 51 families settled in 1932 and covers the entire operation of the scheme in the province.

SYNOPSIS

Camilla Hoyt, young and beautiful art student, and Peter Arson, a struggling sculptor, fall love and marry secretly, deciding to live apart until the time Peter can establish himself. Camilla, the adopted daughter of wealthy parents, is not to inherit money when she comes of age. She is preparing herself for life in a course in commercial art, hoping to get a job to enable her to support herself. She has been making the rounds of the agencies. Peter, working in his studio on an idea for a figure with which he hopes to win a scholarship to study abroad, receives a call from a beautiful model, Sylvia Todd, who offers to work for almost nothing if he will employ her. He thinks it over, Peter discusses the matter of a model with Camilla and decides to employ Miss Todd. Together Camilla and Peter decide on a figure. They are at the height of their happiness.

(Now Go On With The Story)

CHAPTER XXI

Sylvia Todd was doing her best to be comfortable in her over-furnished apartment that was three short blocks from Annex Hall where Peter had his studio. A huge electric fan contributed its tireless efforts in her behalf, collaborating with a sweating bottle of ice-cream soda, a five-pound box of chocolates and a dozen assorted pillows. Evidently, Peter's dollar had expanded its usefulness. The telephone jingled at Sylvia's elbow.

She picked up the instrument and drew languidly, "Yes."

"Miss Todd?" inquired a guarded voice. "What did you do?"

"Say, he wasn't going to enter that exhibit at all," Sylvia's tone was belligerent, as if she suspected that he was not as it appeared on the surface.

"Impossible! He just told you that to get rid of you. Didn't you get the work?"

"Wait a minute! Not so fast, or I'll hang up on you. I was one of the men who made him reconsider the exhibit, and I'll bet I get the job tomorrow. He promised to let me know tomorrow."

"You're sure he wasn't stalling?"

"Not a chance. If he decides to do the work, I'm the model, all right. Leave it to me and call tomorrow night. Say, he even gave me a dollar for my dinner," she laughed triumphantly.

"He would. All right. Miss Todd, I'll call about this same time tomorrow evening."

Sylvia clattered the telephone into place and resumed her sipping of ginger ale with a shrewd smile. Her image was reflected in a mirror on the opposite side of the room, for which gratifying purpose the chaise longue was placed at its particular angle. To that image Sylvia nodded.

and observed aloud, "Who knows? I may go into this thing on my own interests. It is kinder than I expected him to be. But I'll work along with the boss until I see where I stand. Safety first for your story."

So Peter began work on his piece for the exhibit. Into it, he put his whole soul and mind, for he was no half-way man about anything he did. Eagerly concerned as he was in his progress, Camilla did not intrude of ten upon his time and solitude. She went out to the studio during working hours, and most of their time together was given to walks in the park or meeting for dinner to talk things over and absorb new courage and inspiration from their companionship.

Already, Camilla was apprehensive about her own future, because she seemed only to meet with pessimism and panic everywhere. But she gave Peter no hint of her anxiety, striving to put out for his encouragement a larger measure of hope and confidence than she herself possessed. Added to her increasing fear for her own future, was an atmosphere of despair and upheaval at the Hoyts. As Camilla's friendly maintained her preference to become independent, Mrs. Hoyt grew more antagonistic to everything she did. It became increasingly difficult for her to see Peter without admitting how much and how often she did see him. That Peter knew that her occasionally Mrs. Hoyt knew, but that Camilla spent hours with Peter which she accounted for vaguely as shopping, a matinee, upon the masculine side, "It is not easy for any woman to admit any accomplishment of a rival which attracts male attention."

With the encouragement of applause, she performed the whole series of dives; the graceful, jaw-knife, the difficult backhand, the twisting corker, the hurtling saucer-knife. After the last, she swam slowly out to the float and pulled herself up to rest. Peter immediately followed up and white-skinned. "Is there anything you can't do?"

"Don't flatter me, because I've had years of time to practice diving. I wish I could do something practical." "You're always practical. Don't you know you're a lot different from the other girls like Camilla and Sylvia?" "I hope I am somewhat individual," she said lightly, and blushing suddenly into the water.

Avia lay on the beach. Her bathing suit was scarcely damp. Swimming was much too strenuous, she thought, to be worth the effort. A cooling dip was enough for her. Camilla dropped her head, her breathing had after her race with Peter. "You have a horrible amount of energy," Avia remarked, her tone divided between admiration and disapproval. "I wish I had something to use it on, I like to be doing things."

"So I've noticed. By the way, have you seen Peter Arson lately?" "Camilla, occasionally," then replied casually, "Oh, occasionally."

"Is he working for the exhibit?" "I believe he is."

"Why don't you ask him to the party?" "Needs this sort of thing if anyone does."

"It happens I am not his keeper, and besides, I didn't do the planning for this party. It was mother's idea entirely."

"So it was. I've a bright idea. Let's do it in and get Peter now. Your mother wouldn't mind, would she?" "Perhaps not. But I don't think Peter would come."

"Why not?" Avia demanded sharply. "He would if I ask him, I bet."

Camilla decided that it was wiser not to oppose her, and not to be too familiar with Peter's inclinations. "Ask him if you wish, I don't mind." But she wondered what Peter would do about it. She did wish to see him there with them. He needed the rest, and change. Perhaps it was just as well if Avia did the persuading. He would be more likely to come, under the circumstances.

Change in Locomotives

Railroad President Predicts That Gas Will Replace Steam

The days of steam locomotive, with its belching smokestack and hissing cylinders, are definitely numbered, in the opinion of Fred Sargent, president of the Chicago and Northwest Railway. Single unit gas and electric locomotives of various designs will gradually supplant the iron horse in both suburban and long haul service, Sargent believes. The single unit system is more practical, flexible and economical than steam or a comprehensive central-plant electrified system.

Elaborate studies made by Westinghouse and General Electric show that it would cost at least $60,000,000 to electrify the three suburban routes of the Northwestern with a fixed power plant system," said Sargent.

I predict that within eight or ten years, possibly sooner, gas or unit or oil-electric engine, will be so far developed that it will take the place of steam on American railways."

Fishing in Madagascar

Natives Find Living Fishhooks Fine For Purpose

When you go fishing in Madagascar you don't always use a rod and reel, you just get a piece of stout line and a fish called a huanay, all alive and wriggling, and let him do the fishing for you! This strange inhabitant of the sea, is about as long as a man's arm and its back fin is just like a brush, covered with a tiny layer of some sticky liquid like gum. When this brush fastens on to another fish, that unlucky fellow is held fast and secure, and the fisherman who is using the huanay as bait, in the line, detaches the captured fish, and puts his "swimming hook" in the water again. These "living fishhooks" last for years, because the natives keep them in wooden cages, which they fasten in the sea. Needless to say, this useful fish is fed regularly every day by its owner, the chief diet being rice or small fish. Not only fish, but even turtles are said to be caught in this extraordinary manner.

The famous Dead Sea of Biblical history, now owned jointly by Palestine and Trans-Jordan, is estimated to contain 43,000 metric tons of chemical salts.

Spain Well Picked

Secret Service One Of Most Efficient In Europe

Some Spaniards once remarked jokingly that every third man in Spain is a policeman. As a matter of fact, Spain has one of the largest and most efficient secret police forces in Europe, built up by Primo de Rivera, and maintained and strengthened by his successors.

All the criminals and most of the potential criminals in the country are spotted and are arrested when and if the necessity arises. Foreign anarchists and criminals who slip down the border to Barcelona are kept in most of their well known to the Spanish police.

Perhaps the most interesting aspect of the secret police's work is the political. It is almost literally true that the Minister of Interior bears every political remark of importance that is made in Spain. The government knows pretty well who to have watched, and it is notorious that no group of Spaniards can keep a secret.

Cafe and cabaret girls are said to be paid by the government when they bring in reliable tips. In addition to the Civil Guard, the Security Guards and the municipal police force, the republic has just added 5,000 assault republics to its roster. They are tall, husky, quick and unafraid. They are drilled in gymnastic tricks and taught that firearms are to be used only as a last resort in any emergency. These assault guards are said to be the special police of the republic.

THE RHYMING OPTIMIST

By Aline Michaels

A MOTHER PRAYS

God, I would keep my son as now, So dear, so undefiled, With innocence upon his brow. A sweet and joyous child!

But since I know that cannot be, May he grow wise and strong, Well-armed in integrity, Relentless foe of wrong.

May he be with gladness paid his part Within the world of men, And find his way to gain in his heart And faith to try again!

But, Father, in his breast I pray Leave one unchanging place, Where still a little love will stay For mother-love's embrace!

Big Mobilization

The manager of a touring theatre or of the theatre in a small town or of the theatre in a small town where his company was to appear.

"Would like to hold rehearsal next Monday afternoon at three. Have your stage manager, carpenter, property man, electrician, and all stage hands present at that hour. Four hours later he received the following reply: "All right. He'll be there."

A Movable Date
Fred—"I've a date tonight with the beach you introduced me to. It's her birthday and I've got this sack of lace for her."

Jack—"She's doing well. Ask her to show you the bracelet I got her for her birthday last week."

Little Help For This Week

"Are they not all ministering spirits?"—Hebrews 1:14.

May I reach That purest heaven, be to other souls The cup of strength in some great agony. Enkindle generous ardor, feed great Be the advent presence of a good diffused. And in diffusion ever more intense. So shall I join the choir invisible Who breathe the gladness of the world.—George Eliot.

Certainly in our own little sphere it is not the most active people to whom we owe the most. Among the common people whom we know it is not necessarily those who are busiest, those who are ever on the rush after some visible change and work. It is the lives like the stars which pour down on us the calm light of their bright and faithful being to whom we look up, and to whom we look for the deepest calm and courage. It seems to me there is there a reassurance for many of us who seem to have no chance for active usefulness. We can do nothing for our fellow-man. But still it is good to know we can do something for them, to know that this we may know surely that no man or woman of the human world can ever be pure, strong, gentle and good, without the world being better for it, and without somebody being helped and comforted by the very existence of that goodness.—Phillips Brooks.

New German Oath

A new military oath "in harmony with the new state," has been authorized by the German cabinet. It reads: "I swear by God and this holy oath that I shall loyalty and honorably serve the people and the fatherland always, and that as an obedient and courageous soldier I shall be ready at all times to sacrifice my life for this oath."

School Fairs

School fairs in the rural districts, although handicapped by present conditions, continue to be a very important factor in rural life of the province. During the past year over 600 rural schools have participated in school fairs, according to a report just compiled. Some 60,000 entries of all kinds were shown at the 75 fairs held during the season. Many of the fairs were fully as successful as in former years. During the annual scholarship course for winners in school fair work, held this year at Onda school of agriculture, nearly 600 boys and girls were guests, and benefited from the lectures given.

Second Payment for Beets

The best sugar growers of southern Alberta have had a second cash payment on account of beet deliveries made to the sugar factory at Raymond.
